John Moore and William Allen, the latter a nephew of Mr Samuel Allen of Salem, were drowned in the Coast Fork of the Willamet river, a short distance from Creswell Lane county, last week It seems that the ferryboat belonging to Mr Knox got away and lodged in a drift some distance below, and four men, including Moore and Allen, got into a skiff and started down to assist some parties in getting the boat out When a short distance above the drift the skiff was caught in the overhanging boughs of a balm tree and was knocked into splinters Two of the men caught to the limbs of the tree, but the others were drowned The parties below seeing a bucket floating on the surface, rightly guessed an accident had occurred, and started to the assistance of the men The two men who were hanging to the tree were rescued by means of a rope thrown to them The body of Moore was found in thirty minutes after the accident, and that of Mr Allen some time next day

The Yamhill Obstruction

McMINNVILLE, Jan 4, 1873

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I notice in your to day's daily that the Commercial Mill on the Yamhill has been compelled to suspend operations, and I shall here add, at great expense of delay to the proprietors daily The facts are these The owners of the mill, with other shippers, for a number of years have had perfect free and uninterrupted navigation of the Yamhill river until very recently During last summer, by order of the railroad ring, a bridge was built across the river some three miles below McMinnville The bridge is so constructed that it will not allow running drift to pass but will collect against the bridge and navigation rendered impossible The steamer Dayton has made several trips to the bridge and partially cleared the river, but the principal obstruction is the bridge itself There is no means by which to raise the draw The individuals who own the bridge have wholly neglected and refused to put it in order for passing boats Now let us see what has induced the railroad ring to such a course of conduct The inducement of concentration of freight at St Joe and the fear of river competition against the railroad on the West Side From the manner of the piling of the bridge a great many are of the opinion that the chief purpose of the construction of the bridge was to hang the river above St Joseph for the balance of the season, as the steamboat company, interested with the railroad, are indifferent as to how soon the impediments to navigation are removed, well knowing shippers will have to haul to the railroad in the spring

McMinnville has been a town of manufacturing trading and shipping importance for the last sixteen years The citizens have invested here largely, and have given a large amount of valuable lands and other property to aid the railroad, and the very men come and obstruct, to their injury, the channel which Nature's God has given to their special benefit

How long is this to be tolerated? The steamer Dayton feels no special interest to force herself through the bridge, as she is owned by the railroad ring Now that the locks on the Willamet are through, any boat or two might come up daily and the shippers would sustain them The Commercial Mills alone would sustain one boat from now on till April Owing to the obstruction to navigation thus far, this mill has been at a cost of $350, and from present appearances may be that much more

The petition of the citizens of this county asking Congress for an appropriation to improve this river is eight years long with signatures, and will be forwarded to Washington by this mail Very respectfully yours,

HEMMI

We find the following among the California Associated Press dispatches from New York December 30th

The Tribune's Washington special states that the President visited the Treasury Department yesterday evening and was for two hours in conference with Assistant Secretary Richardson The President is reported to have the fullest confidence in Richardson as a man of sound judgment and great financial tact, and friends have often conjectured since the election that he would attest his friendship and respect by having the Assistant Secretary take charge of the department after the 4th of March next in case Boutwell should resign On the other hand it is stated that Richardson recently said he did not desire the place, but should retire with his chief and engage in the banking business in Europe In such an event many believe the President's choice will fall upon one of the prominent bankers of the country with whom he is on intimate personal terms

A Washington dispatch of December 30th says

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue contemplates a change in whisky regulations on the 1st of January, under which alteration there is an allowance of one fermenting period but in no case more than forty eight hours will be made upon opening of addition in tubs before those additional tubs are included in arriving at the producing capacity Heretofore additional tubs have been included from the moment they were opened The new ruling will be prospective from the first of January but in no case will it be retroactive, or in other words it will relate entirely and only to the products of January and future periods

Three thousand tons of gun powder are stored in the Government magazines at Washington, and the people can't sleep nights through fear of being blown up

Stokes Convicted

NEW YORK Jan 4—Stokes trial, after extensive argument which the character of Fisk and the witnesses for the prosecution were severely excoriated by Townsend, closed at 10 o clock Fierce was great applause from the audience upon the conclusion of his address which was suppressed by the Judge After recess Beach commenced his reply for the prosecution, and spoke several hours He reviewed at length the testimony of the principal witnesses calling upon the jury to judge whether, from the story of Stokes himself, the case was not one of murder Stokes early career and the circumstances of the murder were commented upon with severity On the question of premeditation, Beach submitted to the jury, on broad principles whether at the moment of firing the fatal shot the prisoner intended to kill When Beach has concluded, the Judge at once proceeded to deliver his charge After complimenting the jury and counsel, and the press for abstaining from criticism on the case, he charged that all questions were to be discarded which bore upon the character, habits or social surroundings of either of deceased or prisoner The killing being practically conceded, the question was whether that killing was a crime It was agreed by both sides that the killing was either murder in the first degree or manslaughter in the third degree, or justifiable homicide To determine this point at issue, it was important to consider whether there were two pistols found, and whether the prisoner was acting in self defense He then explained the theory of the prosecution that there was but one pistol, and of the defense, that there were two He intimated that the jury might consider another theory viz that the pistol found by the bed was dropped by the prisoner, though this theory was irreconcilable with the testimony No one testifies to seeing a pistol in Fisk's hands, except the prisoner The silence of the prisoner when arrested did not necessarily involve his guilt If the jury believed the prisoner fired from a premeditated design to kill without fear of danger, they should find a verdict of murder in the first degree unless they found a verdict of manslaughter in the third degree, and on the latter point they were to consider if there was a conflict, and whether the character of Fisk was such as from menace to lead to apprehensions of danger On that point only, viz whether deceased was personally violent and a dangerous man or not were it by to consider his character It was the duty of the prisoner to satisfy them that the killing was not murder The Judge then explained the kind of doubt to which the prisoner would be entitled, and in conclusion said it would be a great misfortune if the jury now disagreed

The jury in the Stokes case after a few hours absence, entered about 11 o lock and rendered a verdict of murder in the first degree Judge Boardman defer

Preparing for the Conflict

To day Congress will reassemble and the work of the session will commence in earnest Before the holidays little was attempted or coptinuch business as could be disposed of without extended discussion There appeared to be a sort of general understanding that matters upon which there were likely to be radical differences of opinion shall be sent over till after the holidays The result was a large proportion of the old business upon which there was a substantial agreement, has been disposed of and the remainder of the time will be mostly devoted to new business and to measures that meet with opposition

Prominent among measures of this latter class, is the bill to grant Goat Island in San Francisco Bay, to the Central Pacific Railway Company for depot purposes This matter has been agitated for a long time Once it seemed almost certain that the measure would pass, but the opposition of the people of California, especially of San Francisco, proved so strong and active as to balk the scheme. It passed the House at the first of last session, and comes up now for consideration by the Senate If it fail to pass the Senate before the 4th of March, the action in the House will count for nothing, and the measure will have to take its chances afterwards as new business. Its friends in that event will have to begin again at the ground.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, who generally acts with the Central Pacific Company, in its Congressional enterprises, is for the bill, and so is Sargent, of California, Senator elect, who is now a member of the House Senators Cole and Casserly, of California, are opposed to it, and have been able thus far, backed as they have been by the sentiment of their State, to prevent its passage The danger of losing the ground already gained, the passage through the House, stimulates the railway company and its retainers to desperate activity. An immense lobby has been organized at the National Capital for the purpose of forcing the passage of the bill through the Senate before the 4th of March, and it is announced that this lobby is soon to be reinforced Meanwhile the people are also awake to an appreciation of the necessities of the hour, and are organizing for the most vigorous opposition possible to be made Great meetings are held, presided over by the Governor of the State, and addressed by the foremost commercial men, for the purpose of declaring their sentiments against the measure in such a manner as cannot be mistaken by Congress. A delegation is proposed, of the most prominent men of the State, to proceed to Washington and convey to the Congress the sentiment of the people of California against the scheme

Upon such a gigantic scale is the battle to be fought. The advantages of discipline and regular pay will, no doubt, be on the side of the railway company's crowd. The advantages of a correct purpose and an almost unanimous constituency will be with the representatives of the people.

Unnecessary Martyrdom

The refusal of Susan B Anthony to accept the proffered assistance of those persons who offered to become bail for her, displays a high degree of that quality which is commonly denominated "pluck," which generally accompanies courage, and is always a pretty fair substitute, and which all admire. She appears to think the giving of bail would be in some way an admission of the crime with which she is charged—that of illegal voting—and therefore she chooses to remain in jail This seems to us, and we believe it will be so regarded, as a foolish fancy The fact that the committing magistrate required her to give bail is evidence that he supposed her guilty, and by giving bail she would have acknowledged that she, like other people, is amenable to the law and subject to its ordinary modes of procedure And, besides, nobody supposes she is a criminal in the customary sense of the term, and would not suppose so if she should be convicted And yet everybody knows she committed the act charged—that is, voted—and that she did so knowing her right to vote was questioned, but without attempting to practice any deception as to her qualifications as an elector The question she thus raised is one strictly of construction—whether a woman has the right to vote under the laws of New York and no matter how it may result, no person will ever think of placing Miss Anthony in the same class with the ordinary fraudulent voter, who pretends to possess qualifications which he does not possess, thereby deceiving the judges of the election as to the facts, and causing them to receive his illegal ballot If Susan B. Anthony had dressed herself in male attire, and voted under the name of David Johnson or John Brown, her case would be like that of the common illegal voter. The time she displayed true courage was when, resolved to test the question of her right to exercise the elective franchise, seeing that could only be done by some woman stepping forward and making herself the target of the law, she took the step which gave rise to the prosecution now being conducted against her

It is difficult to perceive any sufficient reason for the advance of one dollar per ton by the Oregon Steamship Company on flour from Portland to San Francisco The charges were high before This increase of the cost of transportation will add just so much to the burdens under which the producing population of the county are already groaning Every cent that is added to the cost of transportation from Portland to San Francisco, is so much taken from the rewards of production. At present our market is San Francisco No matter where the breadstuffs we raise are finally consumed, we ship so little abroad, and San Francisco so thoroughly controls the foreign shipping of the coast, that we are forced to accept San Francisco prices as the criterion by which to regulate our own, and to count the cost of carrying to San Francisco, as a part of the expense of transportation, though our produce may ultimately reach the Liverpool market This must be so, until we can secure charters direct to Liverpool sufficient to transport our entire surplus, at rates ranging but little above the tariff from San Francisco to Liverpool For some time to come, therefore, the freight charge to San Francisco will be deducted from the price paid for wheat in Oregon We hope this is not to be the case forever, but so long as it is so, Oregon producers alone will bear the burden of the high rates of transportation from some of the various points of shipment along the rivers, to San Francisco.

Acceptance of the Canal and Locks

The Commissioners appointed under the act of 1870 to examine and report upon the Canal and Locks at the Falls of the Willamet, have made their report accepting the works on behalf of the State of Oregon The following is a copy of their report

PORTLAND Oregon Jan 1 1873

TO HIS EXCELLENCY L F GROVER Governor of Oregon—Sir The undersigned the Commissioners by you appointed to examine the works and report as to the completion of the Canal and Locks constructed at the Falls of the Willamet river on the west side of said river at Oregon City have the honor to make the following report

The Commissioners in pursuance of their said appointment met at Oregon City, on said Willamette river, on the 28th day of December, 1872 and organized as a Board John Whiteaker being chosen Chairman of the Board and George R Helm Secretary thereof after which the undersigned Commissioners proceeded in person to view inspect and examine the works comprising the Canal and Locks so constructed as aforesaid on the west side of the said Willamette river, opposite Oregon City and after giving the works aforesaid a full examination in all their parts that is to say The excavations fillings stone work, iron work, wood work together with any and all other material used in the construction of the said Canal and Locks, as far as was then visible, were of the opinion that the said works were built and constructed of the best material obtainable and the workmanship thereon bestowed of a most excellent character

The Commissioners so appointed as aforesaid measured the length and breadth of said locks and found them to be constructed, built and completed in all things in accordance with the terms, provisions and requirements of the law providing for the construction of the same entitled "An act to appropriate funds for the construction of a steamboat canal at the Willamette Falls," and approved October 21, 1870.

The Commissioners, however not being willing to accept and fully approve said works without first seeing them put to a practical test, required of the Company who constructed the same that they should pass a boat through the said Locks and Canal which requisition was readily and cheerfully acceded to by the Company, and the 1st day of January 1873, was fixed as the time for such purpose Whereupon the Commissioners adjourned to meet at the city of Portland on the 1st day of January, 1873

PORTLAND, Jan 1, 1873

The Commissioners above referred to met this day, pursuant to adjournment, at the city of Portland, and from thence proceeded to the Falls of the Willamette in the steamer Maria Wilkens and the said Commissioners remaining on board of said steamboat, witnessed the passage of the said steamer through the said Locks and Canal and then returned through the same

In the opinion of the Commissions the machinery with which said locks are operated is of the best, and is of the latest improvement.

In view of all the foregoing, and believing the said Locks and Canal at the Falls of the Willamette river are completed in all respects as required by law, and in many respects on a more extensive plan than that required by the act referred to, we do hereby approve and accept the said Canal and Locks for and on the part of the State of Oregon.

L BROOKE
GEO R HELM,
Commissioners

The time within which the work was to be completed was January 1st, 1873, and on that day the first steamboat passed through the Canal, though we are informed that a boat could have passed through some days earlier, if necessary This is the first instance of which we have any recollection in which public enterprise of such magnitude has been completed without asking for time or any other indulgence from the State

We have received the first number of the California Art Gallery, a handsome quarto, devoted to the promotion of Esthetic culture on the Pacific coast It is well printed, on tinted paper, and contains nine pages of letter-press besides a piece of music entitled "Yosemite Waltz" A typographic chrome is promised with every future number.

From the specimen before us, we think this periodical will prove a valuable addition to the current literature of the Pacific The first question which suggests itself to our mind is, can such a periodical live on this coast? The specialty its publishers have chosen is the least popular of all in the field of literature, not excepting the professional journals We trust the "Art Gallery" will find in the high appreciation of that cultivated class to which it will find its way, an ample compensation for their lack of numerical strength. In literary tone, this first number is up to the best of its kind

The hall, which will be used as the room for the several lodges of the city will be on the second floor, and is situated on the second floor, and is 55x85 feet. The walls of the room are unadorned, except by pictures set in panels at intervals At the east end of the hall, in the chair of the Worthy Chief Templar, is the motto "Worthy Chief" and at the west end that of the Vice, on the right of the Chaplain, and on the north, the motto "Good Templar" In the center of the hall, on the altar, resting on a pedestal, is an open Bible, with the inscription "Purity, Fidelity, Charity" The Secretary is on the left of the Chief Templar, and the Treasurer on the left of the Chief Templar, and the seats of the members are on the north and south sides of the hall

Promptly at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening the members of the several Lodges assembled in their respective halls, and from there marched in procession to the new Temple which was duly dedicated to the cause of temperance.

CITY.

DEDICATION OF THE GOOD TEMPLARS HALL.—The Good Templars Hall, situated at the corner of Third and Alder streets, was dedicated on Saturday evening to the cause of Temperance, with all the rites and ceremonies of the order

This hall was commenced last summer by the Good Templar Hall Association, a joint stock company, with a capital stock of $50 000, and finished the last week. The building is construct ed of wood, two stories in height, and presents a handsome and rather imposing appearance The hall, which will be used as the room in which the several lodges of the city will hold their regular meetings, is situated on the second floor, and is 42x85 feet. The walls of the room are as yet unadorned, except by pictures scattered along at intervals. At the east end of the hall, is placed the chair of the Worthy Chief Templar, at the west end that of the Vice on the south side the Chaplain, and on the north, the Past Worthy Chief Templar. In the center of the room is the altar, resting on a pedestal, inscribed "Temperance" On the altar, which is painted blue and white, are inscribed "Purity, Fidelity, Love and Charity." The Secretary is on the right and the Treasurer on the left of the Chief's chair The seats of the members are on the north and south sides of the hall

Promptly at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening the members of the several Lodges assembled at their respective halls, and from there proceeded in a body to the new Temple which was to be dedicated to the future use of the Good Templar Order and to the cause of temperance

At the appointed hour for dedication—7 30 o'clock—the large hall was crowded to repletion with members of the Order and lady and gentleman spectators who had assembled to witness the interesting ceremonies The ceremonies were conducted by the officers of the Grand Lodge, viz: G W C T, Jacob Conser, G V. T, Henriette Miller; G C, J B Garrison, G S, J A Smith, G A S., E W Ryan, G T, J. H Frush, G Chap, L M Parrish; G M., C W. Hatfield. G D M., J. C. Anderson, G I G.,—— Packard; G O G.,—— Moore, and P G C T A G Walling.

Three quarters of an hour or more were consumed in the dedicatory exercises. At the conclusion pertinent addresses were made by H H Northrup, Esq., Rev. A R Medbury, A L Lindsay, G. H. Atkinson, T. L Elliot, also by E W. Ryan, Esq., and the Grand Worthy Chief Templar, Jacob Conser. Some very excellent vocal music was rendered between the speeches, which were all brief, by Mesdames Sears, Clay, Quiry and Caviness, and Messrs Hatfield and Ness. The closing ode of the Order was then sung, after which the assemblage quietly dispersed and repaired to their respective homes

ARRIVAL OF THE SHIP WHITTINGTON AND BARK BARRACOUTA.—The bark Barracouta, Captain James Goddard in command, arrived at this port Saturday afternoon from Astoria, in tow of the tug Merrimac. This vessel sailed from Liverpool on the 15th of August. A very fair voyage was experienced from the point of sailing to the bar. Some rough and stormy weather was encountered off Cape Horn, which latitude was passed in last October. She made the passage in 130 days, and was detained off the bar six days This vessel has an iron hull. The entire length is 170 feet, 19 hold, and 27 beam, with a registered capacity of 610 tons The present is the second voyage the Barracouta has made to Portland. She carried away a cargo of wheat last year from this port, having sailed from Astoria for Liverpool on the 20th of January, 1872 Her present cargo consists of sheet, pig and plate iron principally. The vessel is under charter to Rodgers, Meyer & Co, and will carry away a return cargo of grain for the United Kingdom. The bark is now lying at Flanders' wharf, and will begin to discharge her freight to day. Grain will be received on board as soon as the cargo is disposed of.

The English ship Whittington, in command of Capt. John Purdy, arrived at Flander's wharf yesterday at 10 o'clock from Astoria in tow of the steamer Dixie Thompson. This ship came from Shanghai in ballast. She sailed from that port on the 23d of November, and arrived at the bar on the 25th of December, having accomplished the voyage in thirty two days. The sailing was excellent, no adverse winds having been experienced The Whittington is an iron vessel, and was built on the the river Seine, at Lancaster, in 1800. She is constructed in the most compact and powerful manner possible, and is complete in all the military appointments. The entire length is 200 feet, hold, 21½ feet, and 34 feet beam. Before the voyage here the ship was engaged in the Australia and San Francisco trade. The cargo from Australia to Shanghai consisted principally of coal. From the latter port to Portland she brought stone and sand as ballast. The Whittington has a registered capacity of 970, tons, but can carry with ease and safety 1,300 tons. Her ballast will speedily be disposed of, and a cargo of wheat taken in exchange, as the vessel comes under charter to Hewitt, Wilson & Co.

CONSECRATION SERVICES.—The St. David's Church, East Portland, was consecrated to the service of God by Bishop Morris on the first day of the year. The church edifice which was finished some time ago, was never formally dedicated until last Wednesday The building has not cost much money comparatively, but the money has been well expended. It is a simple nave, with angular openings and open roof, finished throughout in the order of this coast, which is handsomer than the pine so much used at the East. It has a bell gable, for which there is a sweet toned bell—a gift of a parishioner—and a chancel recessed between vestry room and organ chamber, and is to have a chancel window—a memorial, to be put in by the Bishop himself,—the order for which has been given. The chancel furniture and benches are very plain, but pretty and churchlike, and the stone font, given by a parishioner, is costly and beautiful. The exercises were conducted by Bishop Morris. There were present Revs. Jas. Sellwood, John Rorenberg, Dr. Nevius, and C. R Bonnell, the Rector. The service was the usual Consecration Office, with no specially marked features. It was, however, spirited and devotional,—the singing being wholly congregational. Bishop Morris delivered an appropriate sermon on the occasion from the text "Ye shall keep my Sabbaths and reverence my sanctuary, I am the Lord." After the administration of the sacrament, the clergy, the vestry and the friends of the church stayed for a bountiful lunch, which had been prepared in the Rector's study by the ladies A study which has been built on the ample lot, gives promise of the permanent occupancy of this parish.

MURDERED BY APACHES.—A San Francisco exchange of a recent date states that a gentleman in that city has received a letter from Arizona in which his correspondent states that the Leo family of circus performers were murdered in that country by the Apaches They were journeying in New Mexico to perform and when at Apache Pass were set upon and killed There were eight members of the family, and it is stated that all have fallen victims to the atrocity of these blood thirsty devils Mr. Leo, the father, is one of the old pioneer circus managers of the Pacific Coast, his name, in connection with that of his son in law, Geo. Ryland, is familiarly known from Victoria to Sacramento In company with various circus combinations, Mr Leo has passed through this State almost every year since 1857 The intelligence of the tragical end of this unfortunate company will be received with feelings of sadness by the many hundreds who have so often witnessed the performances of the murdered members.

TWO MEN DROWNED.—Our agent at Oysterville sends information concerning the drowning of two men near that place on the morning of the 4th inst. The men were named respectively Charles Tanger and Julius Mack. Tanger lived on Long Island, and was engaged in the oyster business. Mack resided on the Naiselle river, and followed the business of farming It seems they had purchased some lumber at Knaphton and had brought it safely home. On the following morning about five o'clock, they left Tanger's house for the purpose of giving more cable to the batteau containing the lumber, and which lay but a short distance from shore There was at the time a strong breeze blowing from the southwest, and it is supposed that their boat swamped before they reached the batteau One of the bodies was discovered a few hours after the sad occurrence, the other was found on Thursday morning Tanger leaves a wife and four small children Mack was unmarried They were both German, and were honest and industrious citizens

FROM MISSOURI.—A subscriber writing from Chillicothe, Missouri, says "Our first snow of this season began on the 19th of December, with northwest winds with thermometer ranging from 15° to 30° below zero Times hard. Everybody wanting to leave in the spring for Oregon Laboring men are pushed to earn board owing to a dry fall, and hard, dry, freezing winter Fall wheat has suffered badly Look out for immigration to your country in the spring Give emigrants all the information you can in your valuable paper."

NEW BOAT.—Mr John Holland, chief of the boat builders for the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, returned from the Dalles a few days ago, where he has been superintending the construction of a large steamer at that place We learn that he intends soon to commence laying the keel for a large steamer at the home yard, which the company contemplate building the coming season The new craft will be also far in model to the Lurline. It will be used on the lower river principally as a freighter Mr Holland will also build the upper works for the new steamer at the Dalles the present winter The new hull will not be launched from the ways at all but will be allowed to remain on it the high waters most spring will float her clear

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS.—The following Brothers were duly installed officers of Orient Lodge No 17, I O O F, for the ensuing term by D D G M P Kelly J W Clayton, N G S I Joseph, N G S Stafford, R S W J Beatty T, P Kelly, R S N G, R Williams, L S N G Charles P Yates C W S Gordon, W, C Hinkins, I G, F Bode, O G D Winters, R S V G D Ballard, R S S, R W Frazier, L S S Several visitors from sister lodges were present during the installation ceremonies At the conclusion of the ceremonies an excellent collation was spread in the hall, of which all present heartily partook Pleasant social intercourse consumed the remainder of the evening

FRIENDLY VISIT.—In response to an invitation extended Hassalo Lodge, I O O F, by Vancouver Lodge No 3, the former lodge will visit that town this evening in a body The members are requested to meet at their hall this afternoon at 4 30 o'clock sharp The steamer Vancouver has been chartered expressly for the excursion Members of sister Lodges, and sojourning brethren are cordially invited to accompany the visiting Lodge The boat will return to the city at a late hour, to accompany the excursionists back A very pleasant time may be anticipated

FIRE.—This element was discovered last Saturday night about 11 o'clock at the corner of Front and Oak streets, over the store room of Jacobs Bros & Co The fire originated in the building owned by Mr A L Hallock. The alarm was given, and the department promptly responded, but before they could be brought into requisition, the fire, which was communicated from a defective flue, was extinguished. The damage to the building and stock will probably reach $200 The loss is fully covered by the insurance.

CIRCUIT COURT.—The Circuit Court for this county adjourned last Saturday for the term The term commenced on the first Monday of last November, and has continued, with the exception of about two weeks, up to the 4th inst. The next regular term will commence on the second Monday of February, but Judge Upton gave notice that, owing to the extensive docket to be cleared, Court would convene on the first Monday—one week sooner than the regular time

CALLIOPE PURCHASED.—The little steamer Calliope which has been plying on the waters of the upper Wallamet for several years was sold last week at Sheriff's sale, at Oregon City, and purchased by Mr James Bracc. Last Saturday the steamer was again sold, the purchasers being Messrs. Geo. Myers and John Marshall of this city. We are unable to state at present on what line the steamer will run under the new proprietorship.

LODGE MEETING.—Samaritan Lodge No. 2, I O O F, will hold a regular meeting in their hall on Wednesday evening, at which time there will be work in the Initiatory Degree, after which the installation of officers for the ensuing term will be conducted by the M W Grand Master of Odd Fellows of Oregon, J T Apperson. All the members and Brothers in good standing are invited to be present.

WAKE UP SNAKES.—W H. Andras found, the other day, a snake in the water, drawn from a hydrant in his saloon It is somewhat thicker than a thread and is about twelve inches in length. He moves about in a lively manner, creating a feeling of disgust for the liquid in the bosom of the person who may chance to see the wiry reptile. Ugh!

MEETING OF EMMET GUARD.—Next Wednesday evening the members of the Emmet Guard will hold a meeting at their Armory for the transaction of business. Principal among the business will be the election by the Company of a Treasurer and a Secretary.

ILL.—We regret to announce that William H Effinger, Esq, the well known attorney of this city, is now lying quite ill at Salem, where he is in attendance at the Circuit Court as counsel in the Holladay Elliott suit

ANOTHER LOSER.—Mr. Frank Leighton had a stock of goods, which he intended opening in the spring, stored over Hibbard's store, but it was destroyed, like the rest in the building. Loss about $1,000

DISCOURSE TO FIREMEN

A SERMON DELIVERED AT TRINITY CHURCH TO THE FIREMEN OF PORTLAND BY BISHOP MORRIS, ON SUNDAY EVENING JAN 5, 1873

The announcement was made on Saturday that Rev Bishop Morris would deliver a sermon at Trinity Church last evening, especially to the firemen of Portland In compliance with the courteous invitation extended in behalf of the Rector and Warden of that Church, and also on the recommendation of the Chief Engineer, a large number of firemen from the several companies were in attendence The capacious church auditorium was densely packed A large proportion of the assemblage were firemen but a great many of the usual attending members of that church and numerous ladies and gentlemen attracted hither by the character of the special occasion, were observed It was an intelligent and respectable audience as one often sees collected within the walls of a church The discourse was eloquent and appropriate to the occasion, abounding in numerous illustrations of personal courage, as exemplified by firemen under great and trying emergencies, together with such Christian and spiritual reflections as the subject seemed to inspire

THE SERMON

"Born leaders To a good man some would even dare to die But Christ commended His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us" Romans 5 8

St Paul writes those words to the Christians at Rome to pursue in them to embrace the salvation offered them by Christ He is speaking here of the love of God, which it surpasses all human conception, and arguing from it, for the return of love, confidence and obedience on the part of man

The point which he particularly enforces here, is, that God's love went out toward us for our rescue when we were in a condition of enmity and rebellion against Him "For" he says, "when we were yet without strength in due time Christ died for the ungodly For scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die But God commendeth His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for the ungodly" It is a thing possible in human nature that in a spirit of the highest devotion and self sacrifice one man will give his life for another—for a good man, who has won his esteem and affection, by his own virtues, but to die for an enemy, this required the love of God, and this the Redeemer of men did for them, for "while we were yet sinners Christ died for us"

Of all examples of self devotion in the history of the world, none equals this of our Blessed Savior.

He left the inconceivable honors and glories of the Kingdom of Heaven, where all was in harmony with His pure and holy nature, and came to a wicked world, to a life of humiliation, suffering and shame, to redeem and bless a race that had revolted from God, and that was in open and defiant opposition to his laws. Though He was rich in every conceivable possession, yet, as the Scriptures express it, for our sakes—for the sake of these His enemies—He became poor, and made himself of no reputation, and voluntarily submitted to the most cruel and shameful death—the death of the cross It is in describing this wonderful condescension of our Divine Redeemer that these same scriptures say to us all, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus" Let this same spirit of self renunciation and self denial be in you. Know ye that this is the very spirit which procured your salvation, and which must dwell in your own hearts and guide and control your lives, if ye would be the true and accepted disciples of this Savior.

There is no spirit more universally commended among men than this spirit of self sacrifice for the good of others,—a spirit of true heroism as we call it. And so on the other hand there is nothing more universally condemned and despised than a spirit of selfishness and cowardice There are some callings and circumstances in life that give the largest opportunity for the exercise of this better, and nobler spirit, in which also its opposite becomes the most conspicuous and reprehensible Prominent among those, we place those of the soldier, the sailor and the fireman. These are constantly exposed to such perils, and placed in such critical situations as to call into frequent exercise this noble trait of character, or to give sad and shameful examples of its want The soldier who turns and flies from the critical post he was charged to hold with his life, and lets in the enemy upon his unprepared and unsuspecting army or camp, is always held as a now ard and a criminal. The stout and able bodied sailor that rushes to the last place in the last boat and forces back a delicate woman, with a tender infant in her arms, to go down together with the sinking ship, is regarded by all as unworthy the name of a man. And the skilled and experienced fireman that flies from the shrieks of some helpless child, when one moment more of calm self possessed delay, would have brought them both out of the flames in safety and triumph, loses in fame and character in the estimation of every true hearted and manly comrade But it would take volumes to record the examples of this nobler and better spirit in any one of these classes No record is richer here than that of our own soldiers during our own terrible civil war Some of you doubtless shared in that struggle, and can bear witness to many instances of as true devotion and heroism as ever adorned the annals of any army. I remember one of the very earliest, not unworthy to be recalled here, and which, though undistinguished and long since forgotten in the multitudes of others more brilliant and more fruitful in results, has a moral power beyond price. In that fearful and frantic rout, which followed the bloody scenes of Manassas and Bull's Run, when the sense of self preservation seemed to be the only thought of men and officers, one common soldier sat by the way side, staunching the wounds of his commander and soothing his sufferings, all heedless of his own danger, and of his flying and frantic comrades seeking a place of safety. There he stayed until the dying man had breathed his last, and was laid by his hands in the soldier's shallow grave And there he found himself in the power of his enemies, where he filled an unhonored grave There was nothing brilliant in this, there was nothing to excite the praise and admiration of the public—you know of multitudes of cases far more so—but there was that true spirit of self sacrifice and noble heroism that dignifies and overlays certain men wherever he is found. The perils of the sea give frequent occasion for the exercise of the same lofty spirit, and many such cases are on record, where the "common sailor" or humble servant has shown himself a true nobleman. A story is told of a poor negro boy on board a ship who had been entrusted with the care of two helpless orphans The vessel was overtaken by a terrific storm and put out her signals of distress, and soon a boat was seen making up to it, to rescue the passengers and crew. They quickly filled it till room was left only for the negro or the two little ones The inquiry how was, who shall be left behind to perish, when to the admiration of all present, this faithful guardian was found willing to sacrifice his own life, and called out as he himself lowered the helpless children into the boat "Tell my master that Coffin did his duty!" The boat quickly pushed toward the shore with its precious freight and he was left alone upon the unfortunate ship, which as quickly sunk to the depths of the sea. Queen Charlotte then living, requested Hannah Moore to compose a poetic memorial of this tragic event; but that gifted authoress replied "no art could embellish an action in itself so noble"

Better known, perhaps, but equally heroic was John Maynard, the Lake Erie pilot He was widely known in that district as a God fearing, honest, intelligent sailor. He was a pilot on a splendid steamer from Detroit to Buffalo one beautiful summer afternoon The vessel was crowded with passengers, and rapidly nearing the harbor, when suddenly smoke was seen ascending from below, and then in a few moments the fire went up, "fire! fire! on ship board!" All hands were called up Buckets of water were dashed on the flames, but in vain There were large quantities of resin and tar on board, and it was useless to attempt to save the ship. She was without a single boat, and the only chance for the lives of the terrified passengers was in running the doomed vessel straight on the nearest shore Frantic men and women rushed to the pilot and enquired, "How far are we from Buffalo?" "Seven miles" "How long before we can reach it?" "Three quarters of an hour, at our present rate of steam" "Is there any danger?" "Danger here! See the smoke bursting out—go forward if you would save your lives" Passengers and crew men, women and children crowded the forward part of the ship, and John Maynard stood at the helm The flames burst forth in a sheet of fire, clouds of smoke arose the captain cried out through his trumpet, 'John Maynard! "Aye, aye, sir!" "Are you at the helm?" "Aye, aye, sir!" "Head her southeast and run her on shore!" Nearer, nearer, yet nearer she approached the land Again the captain cried out, "John Maynard!" The response came feebly, "Aye, aye, sir!" "Can you hold on five minutes longer, John?" "By God's help I will!" The old man's hair was scorched from the scalp, his hands blistered and burst in the flames, one fell by his side disabled, but with the other upon the wheel, his knee upon the stanchion, and his teeth set, he stood in his terrible sufferings as firm as a rock, to die for others. The ship grounded high on the shelving beach and every soul was saved, as John Maynard dropped at his post a martyr for his fellow mortals' good, and his spirit took its flight to its God Thus it is that brave men dare to die for others But the soldier and sailor are not alone in the possession of this spirit of bravery and self devotion Their pursuits carry them more out of the common walks of life, while the firemen may have constant occasion for this same spirit, in the midst of his ordinary daily duties. Any moment the signal may sound that calls him to peril his life, for the rescue of the property or life of some one else Many are the occasions where this has been done here in our own country with as true hearted courage as in any land While the recent destructive fire in this city resulted in no loss of life or limb to fireman or private citizen, there was abundant occasion for the exercise of true bravery, and time and again our firemen were in voluntary peril of their lives to save the property of their fellow citizens And we all know that this was to a singular or exceptional exhibition of courage And how many records we have of the noble spirit of self devotion of the same class of men in London Edinburg, New York and other large and small cities In the city of London there is a branch of the service called the "Fire Escapes" And there is a Society called the "Royal Society for the protection of life from fire," that keeps men constantly employed in this service The "fire escape" is a tall ladder provided with a stout canvass bag beneath, and placed upon strong iron wheels, ready to be thrust in a moment beneath the upper windows of a burning building Every night at 8 o'clock, this Society's men may be seen wheeling these tall "fire escapes" to their various stations in the great thoroughfares of London All night long, the men remain at their posts of duty, ready on the first alarm of fire to hasten to the spot Hundreds if not thousands of persons have been rescued from the devouring flames, by the skill and daring of these brave men, and there is no branch of the service perhaps, in which they are exposed to such constant peril of their lives Some time since one of those men named Joseph Robinson distinguished himself by his brave and successful efforts to rescue a little child from a burning building The fire on the third floor was rapidly burning and it was supposed that all the inmates had safely escaped, but soon the fearful cry was heard "there is one child left in bed on the third floor" Not a moment was to be lost Robinson seemed almost to fly up to the top of the ladder. He dashed into the burning room, and was lost to sight for several minutes The fire and smoke were blinding and stifling He crept out on the floor on his hands and knees feeling for the child, while he himself was almost suffocated Directly he came to a bed, and felt all over it, but the child was not there He then crawled under the bed, and there found the dear little thing already scorched and senseless He snatched it in his arms and rapidly made his way over the floor that yielded like paper at every foot step till he appeared at the window and the top of the "escape" bearing the lifeless child in his arms He descended safely to the ground, amid the well deserved cheers of the multitude, and delivered the helpless little one to its overjoyed and grateful mother. Had he been one moment later, both he and the child would probably have been burned to death He willingly and knowingly took the risk, and like a real hero he persevered and conquered. Joseph Robinson may be a poor, plain and unpolished man but he is nevertheless a true nobleman, with a brave unselfish heart, and outranks thousands of the proud and great ones about him. Not a few others in this service have distinguished themselves for this same noble spirit. Prominent among them is one Samuel Wood, at present, or quite recently Conductor of the "London Fire Engine Brigade." On one occasion he distinguished himself by the following achievements. A house was on fire in a street in Holborn, one of the various subdivisions of the great city of London. The first on the ground were Conductor Wood with his men and their "fire escape" The flames were burning furiously on the second and third floors, where unconscious or helpless sleepers were known to be. The fire escape is quickly pitched, and the daring Wood mounts it and penetrates the burning building. The crowd wait below in anxious expectation for his re appearance Long moments of suspense elapse, when at length he appears at the window of the second floor with two infants in his arms. Instead of sending these down the canvas through the "escape" in the usual way, he clasped them to his breast and plunging into the escape himself, descended with them to the ground. Again he sprang up the ladder, amid the cheers of the people, and re entered the burning room. He now found the smoke thicker than before, and had much difficulty in groping his way about. He succeeded, however, in finding a woman lying insensible on the floor of the room above that at which he had entered. In carrying her to the window, he fell over a small child which was lying on the floor in a state of insensibility. Grasping the latter with his left hand, with the woman on his shoulder he appeared on the top of the fly ladder, which he descended with safety. The cheers and shouts of the crowd were deafening, when the Conductor came down, but the woman, who had begun to recover, said that her brother was in a loft above the room in which she had been found. Again this heroic man went up, got on the roof of the house, broke up the slate, and with much difficulty pulled the man through the aperture, and conveyed him safely to the ground. For this persevering heroism he received a testimonial signed by the Lord Mayor, and a silver watch with twenty pounds sterling from the inhabitants of White Chapel to whom he was well known. And it is said that up to this time this daring man has saved no fewer than 170 lives by his own personal exertions. But better than all the rewards and renown of men must be his own consciousness of the good and happiness he has brought to others. If he be a devout Christian as well as a brave man, which we can hardly doubt, great shall be his reward in the kingdom of heaven, for they that have their life here in the spirit of their Master, shall find it there, in eternal glory Most memorable, however, among such

An Over Zealous Convert

Under the above head the New York Times thus comments upon Senator Sumner's ob livion resolution

No man has tried the patience of his friends and constituents more sorely than Senator Sumner. The slowness with which the process of alienation has gone on may be taken as a measure of the respect and veneration accorded to a blameless private life and to great services and sacrifices in the cause of freedom. But a man may overdraw the capital of his reputation as surely as he can that of his bank account. And this thing has at least happened to the Senator from Massachusetts. Both branches of the State Legislature have, more in sorrow than in anger, more impelled by duty than resentment, passed votes of censure upon the course of their representative, in introducing the bill to office from regimental flags and the Army Register all momentoes of the battles of the late war. Even the minority which voted against these resolutions of censure appear to have done so on the ground that it was outside of their province to administer rebuke to their representatives in the Senate, and not at all because they were prepared to indorse the action of Mr. Sumner.

But, if a too hasty condemnge of treason would have outraged the popular sense of justice which had inspired the struggle against it, how much more preposterous in Mr. Sumner's proposal to obliterate from the national emblems records which can never be effaced from the national memory? Are the survivors of Gettysburg to be told that the nation is ashamed of their services there and that the less said about the well-fought fields of the war the better? Shall we continue to celebrate the anniversary of national independence but speak with bated breath of that memorable Fourth of July when the news came that Meade had turned the tide of battle southward, and that the dead of those terrible days of '63 had not died in vain? Could the widow and orphan cherish their sole remaining consolation that husband or father died in the cause of patriotic duty, if the nation that honors the victories of the war with Mexico denied a place on its banners to the triumphs of the life-and-death struggle for the unity of the Republic? People will ask such questions without a particle of vindictiveness toward their fellow citizens who were for a while their martial foes. And the men who fought most bravely for the "lost cause" will be the last to demand that those who triumphed should push magnanimity beyond the limit where it assumes the character of contrition. The battles inscribed on our flags and the Army Register, can awaken resentment only in the minds of those who accept them as the record of the stages of a galling subjection which they would gladly throw off. To those on both sides of Mason and Dixon's line who see in them the mementoes of the triumph of a principle which is settled for all time, they may be associated with pride or sorrow or regret; but they will never, as Mr. Sumner urges be productive of that cowardly shame which can only be gratified by insulting both the the living and the dead.

M. Thiers when a Rising Young Man.

One day, a few months before the Revolution of 1830, a friend of mine, M. Auguste Bernard, who had just returned from the Antilles with a large fortune, said to me:

"I want to bring together the two men upon whom in all the world I have founded the greatest hopes—yourself and M. Thiers. He writes in the National, and you serve the Bourbon cause; but we won't take a tablecloth for a flag, and we will leave politics under the table." I had a sneaking kindness for M. Thiers as one of the most sympathetic men in the enemy's camp, and I accepted the invitation. We all three dined at Very's, in the Palais Royal, which which was then considered a neutral restaurant. I saw a very small man with singular strength in his proportions, full of life and energy, standing on his legs as if ready for action, the head and neck well poised, the forehead expressive of every variety of intellectual faculty, soft eyes firm, compressed lips, short hand, but well opened, as if carrying the heart upon it. To the vulgar he might have appeared ugly. But I saw at once in his physiognomy that intellectual beauty which triumphs over any features, and brings out the splendor of mind from the most ungrateful body. Perhaps, as is often the case with southern men, he had too great a consciousness of his power. Modesty is a northern virtue, and the exquisite flaunt of education. He spoke first and spoke last, and listened very little to answers. But he spoke with a vigor, an accuracy, and an abundance of ideas which fully excused the volubility of his lips. It was easy to see that he had been early accustomed to be listened to by his friends. His speech while persuasive, was simple and unpretending. Although we said we would not talk upon politics he very soon went into them, and without anger, but with tremendous severity, tempered only by consideration for my known opinions, he proceeded to cut up Charles X. and the Restoration. I saw that there was saltpetre enough in him to blow up a dozen dynasties. But what struck me most, and what convinced me of the great superiority of this young man, was the contempt he had for his own party. That is a virtue which generally comes only with old age, but which his precocious mind enabled him to have in his youth. I quitted him, convinced that it was all over with the Restoration, since Providence had raised up against it such a powerful enemy. But at the same time I was charmed to have met with an opponent worth fighting, and a man so infinitely superior to the legions of mediocrities with whom he was connected.—Lamartine's Souvenirs.

Very little has ever been definitely known concerning the advantages of the lay of the county across from the Missouri river to the Yellowstone. We learn from the published report of the military expedition that accompanied the railroad survey last summer that a practicable and excellent route was found without difficulty, and without any serious divergences from a straight line. The river valleys along which the line mainly runs, were found to be uniformly fertile, and the "bad lands," which are represented on most maps as covering a large part of the region traversed, were almost wholly avoided by the route taken. Grass was abundant all the way from Missouri to the Yellowstone, and good water was found at convenient intervals during the entire march. Extensive beds of lignite and semi-bituminous coal were found at frequent intervals for a distance of 150 miles. Timber exists in considerable quantities, especially in the river valleys, and consists principally of oak, ash and cottonwood. The expedition was made without accidents or mishaps of any kind, and resulted in the discovery and location of an excellent railroad route.

Henri Rochefort, sentenced to imprisonment for life, for political offenses, was permitted a brief respite November 7th, in order to marry the mother of his children. Accompanied by a strong guard he was conveyed to the apartment of his bride, who at the gates of death awaited him in a little room in the Maison de Sante, connected with the convent of the Augustines. The marriage instrument read at the bedside by the Marie, was signed by Rochefort and his bride, the effort forcing a cry of pain from the dying woman. The ceremony over, the pair were permitted a half hour's privacy, and then the final separation, the bride remaining to die and the groom returning to his perpetual imprisonment in the Isle de Re. The imagination of the man who shall work this story into a novel will be troubled only to comprehend. It will not need to invent.

A Wisconsin man has pasted up the following notice: Having by a long course of dissipation and debauchery so weakened my will as to be utterly powerless to resist the appetite for alcoholic liquors, and not being particularly anxious to die and be d—d as yet, I hereby solemnly swear that I will prosecute to the Ultima Thule of the law any saloonkeeper, druggist, or any other person who shall give or sell me any spirituous or malt liquors of any kind whatever."

The Oxford Press describes a Kansas wedding "When the ceremony which made them one was performed, the happy couple retired to their camp, partook of a supper of slapjack and coffee, after which the wagon bed was improvised into a bridal chamber—and—all went merry as a marriage bell."

The calendar week closes with not many important changes in monetary affairs. There are many who cannot see why such a string, as we should presume, which crop not be denied that the currency affairs of the country cannot, they say, be worse many degrees than from a former standpoint. Are we hugging a delusion in "commercial paradox" and mistaking it for strength, that money should become scarce in a community which is growing in wealth? Not such is the case and the more rapid the accumulation of natural wealth the more apparent stringency there is in the money supply. As an instance in the present harvest year, the agricultural wealth of the Pacific coast is fortunes as great as it was last, and as a consequence it required four times as much capital to move it. The large amounts of money received from the surplus products of the country this year by the farmers, allows a large sum to remain in their hands and this does not find its way back promptly into circulation. The Alta of the 27th ult., on this subject had some remarks which will apply to Oregon, as to California, only in a more limited extent. It states that there is now equal to a year's crop of wheat remaining in the farmers' hands, on which all expenses of sowing, harvesting and covering in, have been paid, and the grain remains awaiting transportation. The purchasing of the agricultural interest has greatly increased without as yet producing its natural effect in swelling the demand for merchandise and by so doing causing the money value of wheat to flow back through the hands of the merchants into the reservoirs in the shape of deposits. This effect is yet to be brought about, and there are many who expect a plethoric condition of the money market when the returns from our surplus products, especially grain, shall be placed in the ordinary channels of business.

All the funds of regular commercial banks are always absorbed by the wants of the mercantile community, whose business operations and resulting deposits make up the circle in which the bank moves. When money is very plenty with merchants and their wants few, the deposits of the banks with which they deal are full and of necessity seek employment elsewhere, since the amount of business paper offering is inadequate. To employ those funds so that they remain always within the control of the bank stock loans become almost indispensible. These, with a good margin made at call, cause the money to earn an interest and at the same time be always within reach. When mercantile wants increase and gradually absorb the bank's funds, these stock loans are called in to meet the prior rights of mercantile paper until the whole is shut off and the banks have no funds but for strictly business paper and bills of exchange. This has been the course of events in the last six months, when the large harvest and all the collateral wants it has occasioned have developed a very unusual mercantile demand for money. The exports of produce have now realized a large amount, and the season for realizing money in mercantile affairs is at hand. From the amount of business that has been done an unusual flow of money into the banks may reasonably be expected this spring, and, as a consequence, the surplus seeking investment, over and above mercantile wants, may be unusually large.

Tonnage at San Francisco.

The following from a San Francisco paper of the 31st ult., under the head of "freights" would indicate a very encouraging condition of the subject, both to producers and shippers

The arrivals on Saturday Afternoon and Sunday were unusually numerous, embracing 14 ships and barks, representing 11,000 tons of tonnage, including 6 from Callao in ballast. Only three out of the 14 are under charter to arrive. One of those we reported on Saturday evening. The other two are the British ship Morope, 1,082 tons, and British bark Gwynesa, 622 tons, to load wheat for Liverpool. Other engagements embrace the Liberian bark Clara Louise, 250 tons, lumber for Sydney America, bark Oregon, 888 tons lumber from Puget Sound for Valparaiso, and schooner Northwester, 80 tons, lumber from Humboldt Bay for Tahiti. The list is encouraging now in port is larger than for any day within the past six or seven months embracing ten ships, five barks and a brig. We have also 50,000 tons of engaged tonnage in port, the largest quantity within our remembrance. It is difficult to give reliable rates for charters, as business is at a standstill. Parties having vessels on hand to load to arrive, chartered at high prices, as well as shipowners, are unwilling to keep up extreme freights. Nevertheless we cannot quote wheat charters to Liverpool above £3, which is a good paying rate. The British ships Carrick, 911 tons, and Jupiter, 720 tons, just arrived in ballast, have charters to load wheat for England.

The California Wheat Market.

The San Francisco Chronicle of a late date does up the rise in Wheat in that city as follows:

The recent advance in the price of Wheat (which is now selling for the best quality at 2 cents) seems to have had a start from a different quarter than was expected. Friedlander and others who chartered all the ships to arrive from England up to January 1st, 1873, have now a large number on hand awaiting cargoes, with many others to arrive. The farmers, who have relieved themselves for pressing indebtedness by selling wheat at lower rates, are now "on velvet," and refuse to accept sailing rates; the consequence is, the "corner" in ships have to pay a large advance for wheat rather than keep vessels awaiting cargoes under heavy expense. This is probably the first time our farmers have turned the tables on the capitalists for years, who either have got to pay a round price for Wheat or allow vessels under charter to lie still. It is said the Wheat operators are in a dilemma and have tried to produce a scarcity of money in order to affect the price of cargoes. There are none more worthy of all the profits which can be secured than our farmers, and we hope they may take advantage of the present necessity of shippers, if it be in their interest.

Miscellaneous.

A Corvallis paper of the 4th inst. says: "This week has been a busy one with our river steamers. The recent rise in the river has given an impetus to trade, and the immense stores of grain are rapidly being transported to the metropolis. The Fannie Patton, Alice, Shoo Fly and Albany have each paid us a visit since our last issue."

The Seattle Coal and Transportation Company will hold their annual meeting on the 13th January.

Mail advices from Callao by the last steamer report eight more vessels listed in ballast for San Francisco, to load Wheat for England at 50@90s.

The United States war steamers Albany and Guerriere were recently sold by public auction at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. These vessels had been retired from service, and were ordered sold by the Government. The Albany was purchased by Daniel W Richards & Co, for $40,000, and the Guerriere by Daniel Butler, for $51,000. The last named was launched in 1860

The late advance in tolls on the Suez route continues to excite discussion, both in and out of Court. The Company, says a New York paper, adhere to their rates, "and declare that they will appeal from the Paris Tribunal to the Turkish Government."

The great and important subject of a ship canal around Niagara Falls, is again being agitated in Congress. It was shown yesterday that such a canal, 6 miles in length and 16 feet deep, would cost from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000, and could be completed in two years. It would allow the passage of the largest lake and many ocean vessels between Lakes Erie and Ontario, and thus greatly reduce the cost of transportation between the East and West.

From all reports, we think the farmers of Oregon have disposed of about one-half of their surplus grain.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT —There come to us reports of some considerable transactions in the interior, and conflicting reports as to prices paid. Our own market has changed but little if any since yesterday. Any change which may have occurred has been in favor of the producers, there seeming to be a freer disposition to buy, and figures are firm. Exporters decline quoting higher than $1 70 per cental though we have no reason now to doubt that considerable advances have been made on this. Large lots. Farmers in the interior are reported to be selling much more freely

FLOUR —The telegraphic reports from San Francisco denote a dull market and the advance in freights from this place will doubtless lessen the amount offering for shipment. Our market is steady at our last quotations. The supply is fair, compared with other periods of the season

OATS—Prices are unchanged the supply being good and trade moderately active. There has been much less increase in this crop the present year over that of last than in wheat, and it is reported that the surplus yet in the country is not large

But little or no change is noted in other home products. To-day a fairly active business is being done and appearances are more cheering than for some time past.

Shipping Intelligence.

Two or three vessels are reported in sight off the bar, and may be in the river by the time this paper is published. We ought to have quite a number of vessels here within ten days.

The Ajax is now in port, and will sail for San Francisco on Tuesday evening next.

The bark Rival, schooner Oregonian and brig Augusta have arrived from San Francisco, and their latter vessel is now at her wharf in this city.

The bark Barracouta, from Liverpool, is also in the river with a full cargo of assorted merchandize consigned to Rodgers, Meyer & Co, who will dispatch her to the United Kingdom with Wheat.

The bark Whittington, in ballast from Hongkong, has arrived at Astoria. She comes consigned to Hewitt, Wilson & Co, who will dispatch her to the United Kingdom with Wheat.
